lodges have their seat at Pressburg and other frontier towns of Hungary.

The sections or committees of the Congress at Trent are sitting with closed doors. In the fourth section the now famous book of that mysterious personage Miss Diana Vaughan has been the object of lively discussion.

The mythical Miss Vaughan is described as an Englishwoman of gentle birth, belonging to a family in which the worship of Satan has been hereditary for centuries. Miss Vaughan described how at an early age she was initiated into Freemasonry. She affirms that in American lodges, principally at Charleston, she has had repeated interviews with Lucifer, who, she says, is both handsome and young. Her interviews extended to other members of the demon tribe. She informs her readers that one particular follower of his Satanic Majesty named Bitru announced at a masonic sitting at Rome, 13 years after the taking of the Eternal City by the Italians, that on September 29, 1896, a woman residing in Paris would give birth to a relative of the Evil One himself. The book gives facsimiles of the signature of Bitru and of several other minor demons. Dr. Kratzfeld, the delegate of the Cardinal Archbishop of Cologne, protested against any serious discussion of such a blasphemous and fantastic work, which he stigmatized as a fraud, probably the speculation of some unscrupulous bookseller. The Germans and most of the Italians present warmly applauded the speaker, but several French priests declared that Miss Diana Vaughan really existed, and that Mgr. Fava, Bishop of Grenoble, in France, knew her and could vouch for her character. They even added that Cardinal Parocchi had congratulated her on her conversion and on her book. The debate at this point was adjourned and resumed in a special evening sitting, but no documentary evidence whatever was produced to substantiate the story of Miss Vaughan's existence, and there the matter rests for the present.

Commenting upon the Anti-Masonic Congress, the Neue Freie Presse says: "It throws a singular light upon Austria and upon the reputation which it enjoys among the reactionary party of all nations that the Anti-Masonic Congress should have chosen an Austrian town for the scene of its labors. Nevertheless, it may perhaps have its advantages. At all events, we gain a distinct insight into the methods which Austria has adopted." It would be superfluous to add anything to these few remarks of the Neue Freie Presse, the Anti-Masonic Congress being only in keeping with the Clerical reaction which is at present working such mischief in Austria.
